

How can you disseminate Erasmus+ project outcomes in the European Digital Education Hub?

ARE YOU LOOKING TO SHARE YOUR VALUABLE PROJECT OUTCOMES IN THE HUB?

Let's pause for a moment: what are you expecting to achieve by sharing your project outcomes? Do you have a clear rationale - perhaps it is even written down? Are you looking to inspire others or showcase what you have learned? Or are you looking to gather feedback, or maybe even co-design a new project idea! Once you're clear about your intention and how you want to share your story, you're all set for the next step!

What is the European Digital Education Hub?

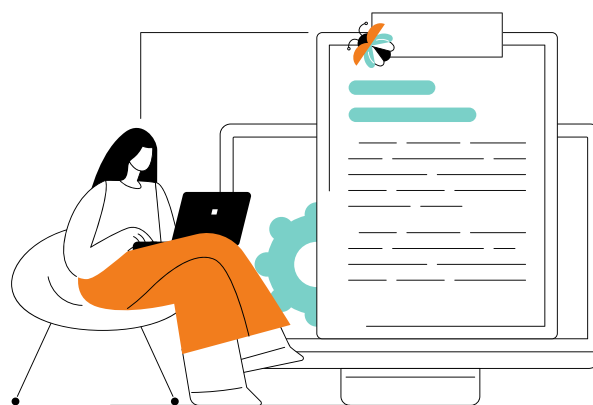

The European Digital Education Hub (EDEH) is the European Commission's community of practice for digital education enthusiasts from all sectors of education. It brings together educators, researchers, policymakers, EdTech innovators, and organisations to collaborate, exchange knowledge, and shape the future of digital education in Europe.

Whether you are developing a project, seeking partners, or looking to stay ahead of emerging trends, the Hub provides the tools, expertise, and network to support you.

DRAFT AN INSPIRING POST ABOUT YOUR PROJECT OUTCOMES

Once you have become a member of the Hub, head over to their workspace on Microsoft Teams. You'll find a channel called "Sharing is Caring" - your space to shine! Start drafting a post about your project: how it unfolded, and what you learned along the way. And don't stop there - warmly invite others to co-design and co-create on what you began.

SHARE OUTCOMES, LESSONS, AND GOOD PRACTICES IN THE HUB, ENCOURAGING OTHERS TO LEARN AND BUILD FURTHER

Keep your focus on concise and practical key outcomes. Offer just enough context for the reader to understand your project and make sense of what follows. The heart of your message lies in what you discovered - the lessons learned, the experiences gained, and the innovative practices that emerged. Consider how the reader might benefit from your outcomes: Could your insights support someone who is planning a similar initiative or thinking about applying for funding? Highlight what others can take forward, adapt, or build on - that's where your impact continues.

KEEP A RECORD OF WHERE YOUR PROJECT OUTCOMES TRAVELLED - AND REMEMBER TO REPORT IT!

Once you've shared your lessons learned or good practices in the Hub, remember to include all of your dissemination activities in your report. The dissemination phase is an essential part of your project's journey: it's your opportunity to share the story of your amazing work, highlight what others can take with them, and show how your outcomes can live on beyond the project itself. Let the world know what you achieved and how others can build on it!
